Understand Your Market

Market research is the process of analyzing data to help you understand which products and services are in demand, and how to be competitive.

General Business Statistics

As a business owner, you will need a solid understanding of your market and current economic conditions to plan for business growth and success. The following resources provide statistics on a variety of U.S. industries and business conditions.

Consumer Statistics

Every business needs customers to be successful. The more you know about your potential customers and your consumer market, the better equipped you'll be to market your products and services effectively.

Demographics

Demographics are the characteristics of a human population. This information is often used by small business owners to conduct research into where opportunities exist within their market and in developing appropriate business and marketing strategies to target customers.

Economic Indicators

A variety of economic indicators can affect your business, from unemployment rates and number of loans granted to small businesses to current interest rates. These resources cover major economic indicators and other statistical data on the U.S. economy and can be useful to your business research and planning initiatives.

Employment Statistics

The amount of money the public has for spending will vary by employment rates. The more that people are employed, the more money they will have to buy products and services. As a business owner, you'll need to understand how current economic indicators affect your business, especially employment rates.

Trade Statistics

Trade statistics are often indicators of sales performance, such as export sales, national and international demand, alternative markets, and the role competitors play. -

Income Statistics

Your review of national statistics on income and earnings will help ensure that you pay rates that are fair based on the marketplace

Statistics for Specific Industries

A great deal of data about specific industries is collected by federal government agencies. This information can be valuable when developing your business plan, refining your business strategy and managing your business over time.

Money & Interest Rates

Financial factors affect every business. For example, variations in interest rates and exchange rates can either add or remove some of the profits that your business makes, and some of the purchase power that consumers have.

Production & Sales Statistics

The production and sale of goods in the United States can be an indicator for several factors that impact your business, such as a rise or decline in retail spending, demand for products or services, or supply costs.

Business Licenses and Permits

In order to start and operate your business, one must comply with a wide range of local, state and federal rules.

Choose Your Business Name

Choosing a business name is an important step in the business planning process. Not only should you pick a name that reflects your brand identity, but you also need to ensure it is properly registered and protected for the long term. You should also give a thought to whether it's web-ready. Is the domain name even available?

Register Your Business Name

Naming your business is an important branding exercise, but if you choose to name your business as anything other than your own personal name then you'll need to register it with the appropriate authorities.

Register With State Agencies

Some business types require registration with your state government: A corporation A nonprofit organization A limited-liability company or partnership

Federal Licenses & Permits

If your business is involved in activities supervised and regulated by a federal agency – such as selling alcohol, firearms, commercial fishing, etc. – then you may need to obtain a federal license or permit. Here is a brief list of business activities that require these forms and information on how to apply.

State Licenses & Permits

Virtually every business needs some form of license or permit to operate legally. However, licensing and permit requirements vary depending on the type of business you are operating, where it's located, and what government rules apply.

Build Your Business Plan

STEPS TO BUILD YOUR BUSINESS PLAN.

Displaying the steps that needs to be done to build your business plan

Are you interested in starting a business? One of the first things that you need to do is to work on a business plan. A Business Plan serves as a road map for the early years of the business. The business plan generally projects 3-5 years ahead and outlines the route a company intends to take to reach its yearly milestones including revenue projections.

A business plan is so important because it actually serves as a compass for the direction your business will take in the future. Having a plan will also help you achieve the things you want to achieve and will help your business to find success as well.
